BIOGRAPHY

Working as a Senior Lecturer in the Department of Literature at the School of Humanities, USM, since 2014, this academic specializes in literature and film, with a focus on literature-to-film adaptations from Malaysia and Indonesia. The research predominantly revolves around Ph.D.-level studies, examining how Southeast Asian literary works are transformed into cinematic narratives. Over the years, the lecturer has been involved in various research projects funded by internal and national grants. Presenting papers at university, national, and international levels, the work spans diverse topics, including theoretical and critical literary studies and folk tales, particularly urban ghost stories. Research interests also encompass cultural and social studies, enriching the understanding of how these elements are reflected in literature and film. Continuing research into film adaptations extends beyond Southeast Asia to include adaptations from China and India, reflecting a cross-cultural examination of how literature is interpreted and transformed through film in different regions.
